ambulance came and took Sutton away. Willing said that he did not see Sutton with two revolvers, but he remembered hearing somebody, he could not recall who it was, say that another revolver had been taken away from Sutton. In answer to questions concerning what he knew about Sutton's having shot up the camp or made threats against anybody, Willing corroborated Bevan's story of how one night Sutton walked out into the company atreet at camp in the presence of Willing and Bevan and began firing his revolvers. "What was he shooting at?" asked Major Leonard.

"Nothing," replied Willing. "He was just pulling the triggers and making a little display."

"Did he try to make any of you dance?" "He said something about it, but just then the Colonel came up, told him to hand over his guns and consider himself under arreet. Sutton promptly obeyed and gave the Colonel his guns."

hand over his guns and consider himself under arrest. Sutton promptly obeyed and gave the Colonel his guns."

When Lieut. Adams was on the stand at the morning session to-day Attorney Henry E. Davis, representing the Suttons, made a point which he and the other Sutton attorneys consider damaging to the suicide theory. He showed that while Bevan in his testimony to-day said that when the shot that ended Sutton's life was fired his right arm was stretched out free from his body, before the first court, held the day after the tragedy. Bevan said that both Sutton's arms were folded under him when the last shot was fired. The Sutton attorneys maintain that Sutton him when the last shot was fired. The Sutton attorneys maintain that Sutton could not possibly have killed himself in the manner described by Bevan, since the wound that caused his death was in the back of his neck. The judge advocate and the attorneys for Adams feel that the testimony of Adams, Bevan and Willing has been exceptionally clear and concrete in the essential points and that the suicide theory has been well established.

To-day Bevan went over much the same ground that he covered yesterday, relling of his finding Sutton pointing two revolvers at Roelk er's feet in the camp, of ordering Sutton under arrest and of Sutton's disobedience of that order. He resterated his statement made yesterday that Sutton fired the fatal shot while he and Utley and De Hart were holding him down.

"I am a healytely certain" said Bevan

Mrs. Lawas N. Sutton, the mother of making no struggle at the time immediately preceding the firing of the last shot.

Mrs. James N. Sutton, the mother of the dead Lieutenant, who with her daughter, Mrs. Rose Sutton Parker, is in continual attendance at the proceedings, today denied fistly the rumor that an insurance company had refused to pay Sutton's life insurance because the first court had found that he committed suicide.

Ever since Secretary Meyer of the Navy Department ordered a second inquiry into the Sutton case there has been a rumor that Sutton had life insurance policies amounting to $20,000 which had not been paid, the intimation being that if the present court reversed the finding of the first court and found that Sutton was murdered or that he came to his death by accidental shooting this insurance money would be recoverable.

under oath. The answer did not reach Coler until yesterday morning, when the Borough President announced his decision and gave out a statement.

Moere's claim that he was being persecuted for political reasons—refusal to remove a McCarren man—is said by Coler to be false. Coler says that he never asked Moore about the politics of his subordinates and that the real grievance against "this man" was his refusal to serve a violation on a neighbor of his who annoyed a widow in Canarsie by constructing a shed against her back fence.

Exception is taken also to Moore's answer to the charges of being absent without leave. The defendant had said that he was no "office boy" and as head of a department did not have to ask the Borough President's permission to leave his office. Mr. Coler says that this shows the condition of Moore's mind—a condition that makes it impossible for him to be a faithful public servant. The most amazing thing in the answer according to Coler is Moore's statement that he absented himself from the meetings of the Building Code Commission because Coler requested it, not wishing to get mixed up in a certain fireproofing deal. Coler says that this statement is absolutely untrue.

Notice of the dismissal, with Coler's reasons, was filed yesterday with the Civil Service Commission. Moore was charged with neglect of duty, absence without leave, gross discourtesy to the public and with withholding a violation from the Corporation Counsel.

There was a little fire in a moving picture place at 214 Bowery !last night and a couple of ambitious young men watching the fire noted a young Chinaman standing in the doorway of a restaurant next door to the moving picture place, and noted also the head of Mrs. Yee Kim in the doorway behind him. Mrs. Yee Kim is the white wife of the Chinaman who was in temporary charge of the restaurant on Eighth avenue the day that the body of Elsie Sigel was discovered. Then Yee Kim himself appeared in the doorway and the two young men hurried with their news to Headquarters. Detective McMullen was sent to the laundry with a picture of Leung.

McMullen seeing no good reason why the young man should not be Leung Lim asked him to go to Headquarters. Ho Wing, who along with Mr. and Mrs. Yee Kim and the possible Leung was found in the restaurant adjoining the picture show, explained that the prisoner was his partner in the restaurant and was known by his adopted name of Louis Dorr. The guests were Vice-President Sherman, Speaker Cannon, Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh, Attorney General Wickersham, Senator Root, Senator Crane, Representative Dwight of New York and the Republican tariff conferees of the House and Senate, namely, Senators Aldrich, Burrows; Penrose and Hale and Representatives Dalzell, McCall. Boutelle, Calderhead and Fordney. Capt. Archibald W. Butt, the President's military aid, was present also but not to talk tariff and politics.

The dinner was filled with political significance from a tariff viewpoint. Senator Crane was there because he had made a canvass of the Senate and was able to tell how every Republican Senator stood in the controversy. Representative Dwight, who is the Republican whip of the House, knew the position of Republican Representatives who were inclined to be rebellious on the tariff proposition. cretary MacVeagh was there to give evidence as to the financial aspects of the situation, and Attorney-General Wickersham and Senator Root were present to explain the details of the corporation tax amendment as well as to give the benefit of their advice in other ways.

was a great success. But as far as any definite results affecting the tariff bill were concerned it amounted to nothing. After it was over some of those who attended said that it had served to produce an excellent state of feeling among the an excellent state of feeling among the conferees themselves and in bringing them closer to the President, but that beyond that nothing of a definite character was accomplished. The only political note of significance was struck by President Taft in stating to his guests that the Republican party should redeem the pledge it made in the last campaign to give a genuine downward tariff revision. He talked informally along the lines of the statement he made the other day to the twenty-three high tariff Republicans who called on him in the hope of preventing him from using his influence to have certain raw materials placed on the free list. On that occasion the President declined to follow the lead of the high tariff men and declared himself to be in favor of admitting certain raw materials free. To-night he talked much to the same effect, but evidently without any intention of entering into a discussion of the isaus involved with his hearers.

During and after the dinner there were some joking allusions to the corporation tax, whose unpopularity throughout the country has caused a good deal of comment among Congressmen. However, most of the time devoted to serious discussion was taken up in an exchange of views as to whether the proposed cusconferees themselves and in bringing country has caused a good deal of comment among Congressmen. However, most of the time devoted to serious discussion was taken up in an exchange of views as to whether the proposed customs court should have its headquarters in Washington or New York. This discussion was regarded mainly as academic, and there was no decision reached in the matter or any attempt to reach a decision. It anything definite can be said to have come out of the dinner it is that every-body there was in a good mood and a harmonious spirit prevailed and there was a general expression of opinion that the tariff bill conferees would reach an agreement before the end of the week and probably would have their report efore one or the other house within that time.

The conferees on the tarif bill had two sessions to-day and settled a number of difficult problems. But the most important work was going on outside of the conference committee room. The President summoned Senator Borah of Idaho to the White House to-day and they had a satisfactory talk over the President's proposal for free hides. Senator Borah has been one of the Western Senators who have come to be known in the tariff vernacular as the "range Senators" because of their ins strine on a duty on hides. After the President and Senator Borah is a had a free interchange of views they discovered that they were not very far apart.

President Taft asked the Senator from Idaho on what conditions he could support a tariff bill which placed hides on the free list. Mr. Borah replied that he had never been opposed to removing the duty from hides if at the same time reductions were made in the duties on sole leather, boots and shoes and the other products of hides. President Taft declared that the view expressed by the Senator was directly in line with his own sentiment, and when Senator Borah left the White House he carried a verbal commission from President Taft to go to the Capitol and interview the ten Senators who held a conference in Senator Nelson's room and to treat also with the Senato

Some question was raised as to whether the conferees had the power to go below the lowest rate given in the Senate or the House bill on leather and its products. Under the rules of conference committees their jurisdiction is limited to the actual difference in the rates involved. But some of the Senators suggested that a joint resolution could be passed extending the jurisdiction of the conferees and authorizing them to readjust the rates to meet the terms of the proposed compromisss.

Senator Borah was much pleased this afterneon with the result of his missionary work, but other Senators showed less disposition to be conciliated. Senator Dick declared that there would have to be a duty on hides and on iron ore or the tariff bill would never be passed. There was another interesting story affect that a coalition had been formed by Senators who were determined to insist that there should be a duty on lides in the senators and the senators who were determined to insist that there should be a duty on hides iron ore lumined.

a coalition had been formed by Senators who were determined to insist that there should be a duty on hides, iron ore, lumber, coal and other articles comprised in President Taft's proposed additions to the free list. These Senators, it was asserted, had pooled their interests, and none of them was to yield in his opposition to the conference report unless all none of them was to yield in his opposition to the conference report unless all of the interests involved were cared for. This insurgent movement within the Senate comprised about twenty Senators, it was said, some of whom are members of the Finance Committee. At the same time an uprising of Republican Representatives along the same lines of resistance was declared to number over thirty. Coupled with these reports, which seemed to come from reliable authority, was the suggestive statement that the Dingley rates were satisfactory and that it would not be a calamity if the tariff bill failed entirely.

Senator Elkins has the credit of organizing the new insurgent movement against zing the new insurgent movement against izing the new insurgent movement against the conference report, not only in the Senate but also in the House. He announced yesterday when he left the Senate chamber after the brief session there that he was going over to the House of Representatives to stiffen the boys up a little. When seen to-day the Senator from West Virginia was in a happy frame of mind. He declared that there was no basis for the rumored failure of the bill. "We will pass a tariff bill," said he. "The movement among the Republicans raw material."

Senator Burrows of Michigan is said to be very positive in his demand that the duty shall not be removed from iron ore. There seems to be less interest in the preservation of the countervailing duty on crude petroleum. One Republican Senator who is leading in the uprising against President Taft's proposed enlargement of the free list declared to-day that Mr. Taft could have free oil and he might be able to secure reductions on the duties on other articles which he was was the last man to leave the conference and invited them to take note of the fact, in view of the reports they had sent out yesterday announcing that he had quit the conference ahead of all his colleagues in some measure of hot haste. Senator Burrows, who figured in the reports of yesterday's serious disagreement, was also in a jocular mood and suggested that the newspaper men could apply to Chairman Aldrich if they desired to procure a "list" of the casualities.

In the era of good feeling which prevalled progress was made with the bill. The zine schedule was finally disposed of. The duty on zinc ore will remain and the Senate rate of 1½ cents per pound on zinc sheets and plates will under the agreement reached to-day be reduced to 1½ cents per pound. The Senate receded from its amendment increasing the duty on salicylic acid to 10 per cent. The Senate amendment placing a duty of 15 per cent on tungsten ore was modified by reducing the rate to 10 per cent.

In the final adjustment of the lead schedule, which has been the cause of much conflict, the conference to-day fixed the duty on ore at 1½ cents per pound, made a reduction in the rate on pig lead and kindred articles from 2½ cents to 2 cents per pound, with proportionate reductions on all of the products of lead pertaining to the manufacture of paint.

or of lead pertaining to the manufac-ure of paint.

One of the most important points settled by the conference committee was the duty on lemons. In this conclusion Senator Flint and the California delegation won out, and the highest rate, 1% cents, fixed by the Senate committee, was adhered to.

HIGH TARIFF INSURGENTS Hold a Conference to Discuss President Taft's Recommendations.

WASHINGTON, July 21.-Those Congressmen who have come to be known as the high tariff Republican insurgents" held Taft's recommendations that raw materials should be placed on the free list of the new tariff law. Twenty members were present and Representative Gaines of West Virginia presided. At the conclusion of the conference Mr. Gaines announced that fully forty-five Republicans of the House were in sympathy with the movement to resist the efforts of the President or place certain raw materials on the to place certain raw materials on the free list or even materially to reduce the duties on coal and iron ore or to the duties on coal and iron ore or to remove the countervailing duty on oil. The question was discussed as to what action the high tariff Republicans would take if a majority in the House seemed disposed to follow the recommendations of the President, but no conclusion was reached on this point. The impression prevails that those who attended the conference are "insurging" for the benefit of the folks at home and that when the time comes they will support the programme of the President.
